PARIS, March 28.—The French army, which has been compelled to withdraw from the battle front, is reported to have been compelled to leave because of the extreme heat of summer, a condition of the conflict.

At the same time, the French Foreign Minister, Aristide Briand, announced that the French and British governments had agreed to a mutual understanding concerning their war aims, and that differences between them were now being removed.

The British government, however, indicated that it would adopt new policies toward France and Germany.

London, March 28.—British officials said tonight that they expect to be able to reach an understanding with the French and German governments.
